三、阅读理解（共 10 题，每题 2 分，满分 20 分）

Passage A

Once there was a king who had everything — gold, palaces, and servants. But he was not happy. He always felt that something was missing (缺失的) .

One day, the king heard about a poor farmer who was said to be the happiest man in the country. The king decided to visit him. He put on simple clothes and went to the farmer's house.

The farmer lived in a small hut (小屋) with his wife and three children. They had almost nothing, but everyone was smiling. The farmer welcomed the king and offered him some simple food.

"How can you be so happy when you have so little?" the king asked.

The farmer smiled and said, "Your Majesty (陛下) , happiness is not about how much you have. It's about how much you enjoy what you have. I have a loving family, good health, and work that I enjoy. To me, that is true wealth (财富) ."

The king thought about this for a long time. Finally, he understood. He returned to his palace not as a king looking for happiness, but as a man who finally found it — in a poor farmer's words.

Passage B

Last summer, I volunteered (做志愿者) at a children's home. I went there every Saturday to help take care of the kids. At first, I just wanted to get some volunteer experience. But what happened there changed my life.

The children at the home came from different backgrounds. Some had no parents; some came from families that could not take care of them. When I first arrived, I expected to see sad faces. But I was wrong.

Those children were full of life! They ran, laughed, and played just like any other kids. One little girl, Lily, loved to draw. Every time I came, she would show me her new drawings and explain every detail. A boy named Tom always told funny jokes that made everyone laugh.

One day, Lily gave me a drawing. It was a picture of a big sun and a small house with flowers. At the bottom, she wrote: "Thank you for bringing sunshine to our home."

I cried when I read those words. I thought I was there to help them, but in fact, they helped me more. They taught me that happiness is a choice — you can find joy even in the hardest situations. That experience filled my heart with something much bigger than "volunteer hours."

A Happy Little Thing

Last Saturday, I helped an old lady carry her heavy bags to her home. She lived on the fifth floor, and there was no lift in the building. When we finally reached her door, she smiled and said, "Thank you, young man. You made my day."

Those simple words filled my heart with warmth. I felt so happy, not because I did something big, but because I made someone else's life a little easier.

I think happiness springs from small acts of kindness. You don't need to be rich to be happy — you just need a heart that is willing to give.
